What Parents & Carers Need to Know about EMAIL SCAMS

Email scams are when you receive a mail from someone purporting to be a genuine person or company, but is actually an online fraudster trying to trick you into disclosing personal information. This is often referred to as 'phishing'. Normally, people click on the links in an email assuming that they will be directed to a trustworthy website – but fake sites, closely resembling the real thing, are knowingly being set up by cyber criminals specifically to capture your personal information, which could in turn jeopardise your financial, emotional and possibly even physical wellbeing.

Disguised Deceptions
Some scam emails can appear to be from companies that you know well. For example, you could receive an email claiming to be from a bank or a company you are familiar with. They could offer you a reward or a discount on a product or service. They could also be offering you a chance to win a prize. If you are unsure, do not click on any links or provide any personal information. If you are unsure, do not click on any links or provide any personal information.

Identify Theft
Another significant risk is falling victim to identity theft. If you have received an email from a company or organisation, they would then have access to your email address and they could use this to impersonate you. They could then use your identity to open accounts, make purchases or apply for credit. If you are unsure, do not click on any links or provide any personal information.

Viruses and Malware
A particularly devastating threat to your system is that some links, when clicked on, could result in malware being downloaded to your device. This could be used to steal your personal information or to damage your system. If you are unsure, do not click on any links or provide any personal information.

Financial Damage
One of the primary consequences for victims of an email scam is the financial cost. If you provide an email address and other personal information, it can then be used to target you with more scam emails or to contact your family. Depending on what information you provide, this could result in significant and/or reaching financial loss or personal stress.

Hijacked Accounts
A scammer with access to your accounts could use them to log in as you – doing you harm. If they need to change the password, they would then have access to your account. They could then use your account to make purchases or to contact your family. If you are unsure, do not click on any links or provide any personal information.

Personal Safety
Another danger of scam emails is that, in some cases, they could ultimately lead to a threat to your physical wellbeing. If someone is demanding to meet with you and this is not your intention, they could attempt to force you to meet with them. If you are unsure, do not click on any links or provide any personal information.

Advice for Parents & Carers

Project Personal Details
Be careful about what you share online. If you are unsure, do not click on any links or provide any personal information.

Beware of Suspicious Emails
If you receive an email which is not from a company or organisation you know, do not click on any links or provide any personal information.

Check Spelling and Grammar
If you receive an email which has spelling or grammar errors, do not click on any links or provide any personal information.

Access Sites Manually
If you or your child visit a website, it is best to avoid clicking on links in an email. Instead, type the website address into your browser. This significantly reduces the possibility of being redirected to a website where fraudsters could capture your personal information.

Don't Open Dubious Attachments
If you or your child ever see any files or attachments in an email that you are unsure about, do not open them. If you are unsure, do not click on any links or provide any personal information.
